For the Clarksville Chro's sle. "And what is life when love has fled ?" G. P. Monats.

Has fled ! the earth without a sun, The midnight sky without a light, The wide, wide desert without one Oasis, or eternal night, ---Are alike to earth deprived of leve.

Love 'round our first existence shone; It smiled from out our mother's eyes, As they were bent upon our own. It beams from out the starry skies, When'er we raise our glance above.

It lingers in the breeze that blows, Around the cottage of the poor; It mingles in the song that flows, From yonder oak beside the door Where rollin trills his lay of love.

'Tis love that paints the sky so bright, That sends the soft refr. shing showers. That bids the sun bestow his light:-Throughout our lives there's not an hour, That brings no proof of heaven's love.

"When love has fled !" this cannot be, For God doth love eternally:---Wild ocean will forget to rosr, The sun withdraw his life before, The God of Heaven forgets to love.
